

Montana WIC

Nutrition Program for Women, Infants and Children

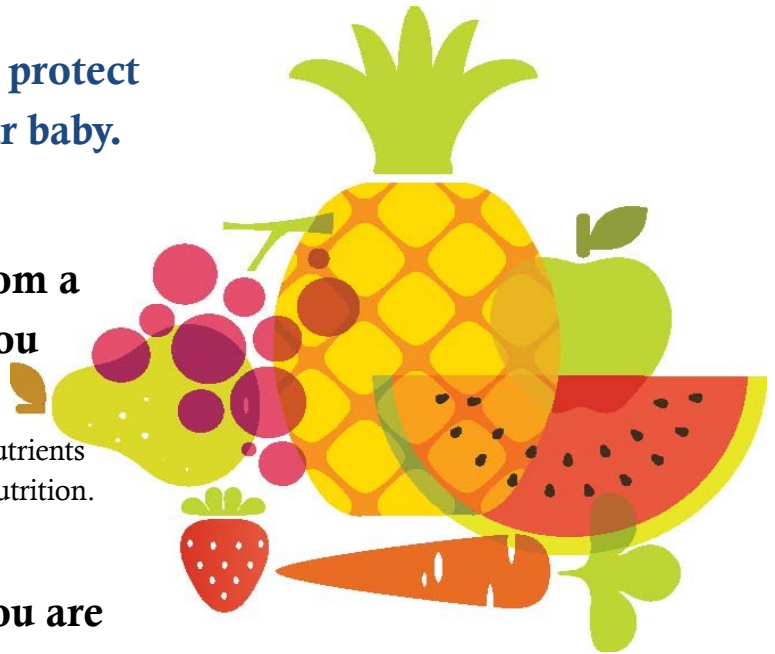

Montana WIC wants to help you protect your health and the health of your baby.

Did you know:

- Buying formula or baby food from a source other than a store puts you at risk. Was the formula properly stored? Extremes in temperature can break down the nutrients in formula, leaving your baby in need of vital nutrition.
- There is no way to know that you are getting real baby formula. Altering baby formula is a common practice. Relabeling standard formulas as special formulas can also leave your baby at risk.
- If you are selling WIC formula and someone else claims their baby got sick from it, you could be held legally responsible.

By accepting the participant rights and responsibilities, WIC participants agree to adhere to program regulations. This includes an agreement not to sell, trade or give away WIC benefits, foods or formula.

If you know of someone selling formula purchased using WIC benefits, please report it immediately to your local agency.
